Technical Questions (Mention below all the technical questions asked during the interview and coding/technical round):

There was a single round for both HR and Technical. Interviewer asked technical questions related to my minor projects and current major project. He asked about the technology used, and what all problem will the model be able to solve. Then he moved on to other projects mentioned in my resume one of which was in android. He asked how did you begin making this app from scratch. And how did you divide your work because making an app is a complicated task that has many parts. He then asked me about my low CGPA and wasn't impressed by the reason I gave which was that I focused on other things apart from my studies.

HR Questions (Mention below all the HR/Non-technical questions asked during the interview):

Same Interviewer also asked non-technical question which start with a quick 'tell me about yourself' while he went through the resume. Then he asked if any of my projects was a group project. I told him about minor projects. He asked how I collaborated with my team. How did me work together from different locations and kept in sync the progress. Then he asked if there were any problems that I faced specifically because of working in a group and how did I overcome them. He asked me about my hobbies and why I have interest in them, and how much involved I am in those. Lastly, he asked me if I am willing to relocate and work on any technology given to us by Infosys. And finally, if I had any questions.

GD/ JAM Topic:

There was no GD round in Infosys but I qualified for GD round of Deloitte. Topic was Demonetisation. Only advise for GD round especially for company like Deloitte is to be polite to everyone else and not counter points of everyone too often.

Any other tips for juniors:

Start practising aptitude by the last month of 6th semester and practise daily and thoroughly throughout the summer breaks because it is asked in every company and toughness level is fairly high for many good companies. Also, since there is time constraint you cannot really score high in this round without much practice.
